1) When Naomi argues with Dave in Chapter One, she seems to suggest his interest in superheroes is immature and will make it hard for him to help his kids grow up to manhood. Are some hobbies or activities childish in themselves? If so, which ones?

2) Tales of the Dim Knight follows Dave Johnson as he gets Super Powers. What would you do if you had the opportunities and powers afforded by Zolgron? Why?

3) On their first meeting, Zolgron insists he's neither good or evil, but strictly neutral. Do you agree? Why or why not?

4) As Powerhouse, Dave seeks to emulate traditional superhero values. In what ways does he succeed? In what ways does he fail?

5) Leona Campbell tells Naomi loyalty can be a bad thing as people are often loyal to people who don't deserve it or mistreat them. Is Leona right? To what extent?

6) What do you think drives Campbell to advocate so strongly for divorce?

7) Marco lectures two hoods and his own son on values but is involved in every kind of criminal enterprise imaginable. What do you think Marco's core values are? Does he live in conflict with them?

8) Marco tries to make up for killing Reverend Jones by doing good deeds such as rescuing priests and even saving a stupid fighter from death at the hands of ultimate fighters. What did you think of his efforts?

9) Dave Johnson stopped being Powerhouse and became the Emerald Avenger in response to the death of Jimmy Olsen. Why didn't he just make Powerhouse a darker hero?

10) In framing corrupt officers, the Emerald Avenger was able to send people guilty of other crimes to jail. Was this justice?

11) What hero in the Group With No Name did you like best? Why?

12) Why don't humans belong in a zoo, aside from us not being an endangered species?

13) The Gospel was presented several times in this story: by Reverend Jones, by the Crusader, and by Carmella. Who do you think presented it most effectively? Why?
